1. SUBJECT:

A Graveyard

2. LOCATION:

There is a graveyard down Hunt's Neck Road about one-half mile and turn and go down a road called Pasture Road to the right and go down about one mile, then turn to the left and go through a forest about a half a mile. There are some old stones (they are just rocks with the names carved upon them). Only one was readable and that was ----- S. Dixon - Died Sept. 24, 1778. The rest of the graves were either sunken with no stones on them or the stones were blank or unreadable.

There is another graveyard also down Hunt's Neck Road about one mile on the right side about three hundred yards from the main road (Hunt's Neck Road) but this graveyard was so old that the stones had either been carried away or were buried down under the ground.
